60TH THE EXPEDITION THAT STARTED IT ALL

This year is a special one for all of us at National Geographic-Lindblad Expeditions: it marks 60 years since the journey that began our story. In 1966, my father, Lars-Eric Lindblad, gathered a small group of travelers and set course for Antarctica, a place so remote it was known only to explorers and scientists. That voyage was the world's first expedition cruise—the beginning of a new era in exploration.

What began in Antarctica was more than a milestone—it was the spark of an idea: that travel, done with purpose, could change how people see the planet and their place in it. Over six decades, that spirit has carried us across every ocean and onto every continent, inspiring travelers to see the world as a connected whole, and to care deeply for its future.

Milestones like this one matter. They remind us of who we are and what we stand for. Just last year, we celebrated 45 years in Baja California, where we pioneered expedition travel and introduced generations of travelers to one of the most vibrant marine ecosystems on Earth. Looking ahead to 2027, we'll mark 60 years in the Galápagos. Few places capture our mission so completely as Darwin's legendary archipelago, where science, conservation and wonder intersect in a way that continues to define what we do.

For me, these anniversaries are not only a celebration of the past—they are an invitation to look ahead, to imagine what future decades of exploration might bring, and to continue building on the legacy my father began.

Looking forward, there is much to be excited about. We're returning to the South Pacific, a region that has long captured my imagination with its vibrant cultures and mythic beauty. We're also expanding opportunities to explore Iceland and Greenland, and offering more departures in Svalbard in both spring and summer—two seasons, two different expressions of the same wild place. Each voyage continues the idea my father set in motion in 1966: that exploration, when done with purpose, can awaken something profound in us all.

As we celebrate this milestone together, I want to thank you for your curiosity, your passion and your enduring trust in our mission. You are part of this legacy, and part of what makes the next chapter possible.

Here's to 60 years of exploration—and to all the adventures still to come.

With gratitude,

Sven Lindblad
Founder, Lindblad Expeditions

EUROPE BY RIVER

INTRODUCING CONNECT AND EVOLVE

This spring, we bring our hallmark expedition experience to Europe's storied rivers with the debut of Connect, followed by her sister Evolve in 2027. Designed with sustainability at their core, these brand-new, 120-guest vessels will offer a fresh perspective on iconic waterways from the Rhine to the Danube.

On board, guests will find an enriching atmosphere, with inviting dining venues and a two-tiered amphitheater for talks, performances and workshops. Each voyage combines private tours and local encounters, guided by cultural specialists and historians.

Two inaugural Connect voyages—Rhine River: Castles, Culture and Culinary Delights (pg. 71) and Holland and Belgium: Medieval History and Scenic Waterways (pg. 70)—explore the continent's cultural heartlands, accompanied by a National Geographic Expert or photographer on every 2026 sailing.

When Evolve joins the fleet, she will host festive holiday voyages (pgs. 72 & 73). Guests will enjoy exclusive experiences, like a private orchestral performance in Bratislava or an after-hours exploration of Melk Abbey—all while enjoying seasonal menus, fine European wines and the timeless cheer of the continent's renowned Christmas markets.

EUROPE BY SEA

Travel aboard our expedition fleet or the elegant Sea Cloud II on new voyages that trace Europe's historic sea routes from storied ports to untamed shores.

Porto, Bordeaux and Bergen: Wonders of Western Europe | 16 Days

VENTURING DEEPER INTO ALASKA

Learn More

Visit expeditions.com/new to learn more about the Greg Mortimer.

INTRODUCING THE GREG MORTIMER

In 2027, we'll bring the charter ship Greg Mortimer to one of our most popular destinations: Southeast Alaska. Purpose-built to explore the polar regions, this 154-guest vessel brings that same spirit of adventure to Alaska's glacier-carved waters. On board, guests will find an inviting atmosphere, with panoramic decks, a lecture theater for expert talks, and relaxed dining venues that foster the camaraderie of exploration. Choose between two eight-day itineraries (pgs. 94 & 95), or combine them for the ultimate Alaska voyage, which explores the forested fjords and wildlife-rich coves of the Inside Passage, as well as the remote and awe-inspiring Hubbard Glacier.

A RETURN TO THE STORIED SOUTH PACIFIC

We're thrilled to once again explore the South Pacific—now aboard the guest-favorite National Geographic Resolution. These voyages revisit some of our most beloved routes with a fresh perspective: Easter Island to Tahiti: Tales of the Pacific (pg. 124) uncovers ancient cultures and remote coral realms; Pearls of the Pacific: The Society and Tuamotu Islands (pg. 123) sails turquoise lagoons and volcanic sanctuaries alive with Polynesian heritage; and Fiji and Tahiti: Vibrant Reefs and Cultural History (pg. 125) celebrates the enduring traditions and pristine tropical beauty of Polynesia and Melanesia.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC EXPLORERS-IN-TRAINING
New Name, Same Spirit of Discovery

Our popular family program now carries a new name—National Geographic Explorers in-Training—and it continues to inspire children and teens in destinations around the globe, from the Galápagos to Baja California and Iceland, where itineraries now extend to Greenland. Guided by certified field educators, young travelers learn to explore like scientists and tell the story of their surroundings through experiences designed for independent discovery and shared family exploration.

GUEST IMPRESSIONS

A LOOK INSIDE THE JOURNEY

A voyage with National Geographic-Lindblad Expeditions stays with you long after you return home. The moments of wonder and connection linger, shaped by the people you meet, the places you explore, and the discoveries that unfold along the way. Here, our guests share the experiences that left a lasting mark.

THE NEWMANS, Baja California

Traveling with: Each other
Number of voyages: 1

"My wife has always dreamed of seeing whales in the wild, so last February I surprised her with a whale-watching expedition in Baja California—it turned out to be the best trip we've ever taken. The thrill was twofold: the whales themselves and the experts on board. Watching the whales spy-hop beside our Zodiac, clearly as curious about us as we were about them, was unforgettable. And the scientists and naturalists were fascinating—I hadn't planned to attend the lectures, but we were the last to leave every night. The trip was exciting and engrossing—amazing in every way."

THE LAURS, Worldwide

Traveling with: Each other and family
Number of voyages: 6

"Some of the perfect '10' moments in my life have been on voyages with National Geographic-Lindblad Expeditions. In the Galápagos, our kids swam with penguins, and a sea lion led them into the surf to play. In Costa Rica, I floated in warm tropical water with scarlet macaws flying overhead, thinking, 'It doesn't get any better than this.' But then I stood among a million penguins in South Georgia, surrounded by the staggering beauty of snow-topped mountains. Each trip somehow tops the last."

THE LAMBRIXES, Galápagos

Traveling with: 15 family members, ages 5 to 75
Number of voyages: 1

"On the first day, we boarded Zodiacs just as the sun was setting. Word spread that a large pod of dolphins had been spotted, and we took off, skimming across the open water. Dozens of dolphins began leaping in pairs beside us—a choreographed dance they all seemed to know by heart. The sunset, the dolphins, the joy on our kids' faces—it felt like the Galápagos was welcoming us, offering a preview of the extraordinary adventure to come.

Beyond that unforgettable beginning, what made the voyage truly special were the people—the crew, naturalists and our fellow travelers, who widened our lens on the world. Our kids loved the National Geographic Explorers-in-Training program, where they weren't just tagging along, but participating as young explorers in their own right. We came home with a deeper sense of connection—to one another and to the incredible people aboard who dedicate their lives to exploration, conservation and education.

RHONDA CHAPIN, Worldwide

Traveling with: Herself
Number of voyages: 20+

"I might be a solo traveler, but I never feel alone on expeditions. The crew makes me feel safe, pampered and welcomed from the moment I step aboard, and before long the other guests feel like family too. I've met so many like-minded travelers—people who care deeply about the environment and exploration. Conversations often start with, 'I think I know you from another trip!' and soon we're sharing stories over dinner or spotting wildlife together from a Zodiac. I've journeyed from the High Arctic to the South Pacific, and on every voyage, the sense of connection stands out most. Traveling solo with National Geographic-Lindblad Expeditions doesn't mean traveling alone—it means being part of a family that spans the world."

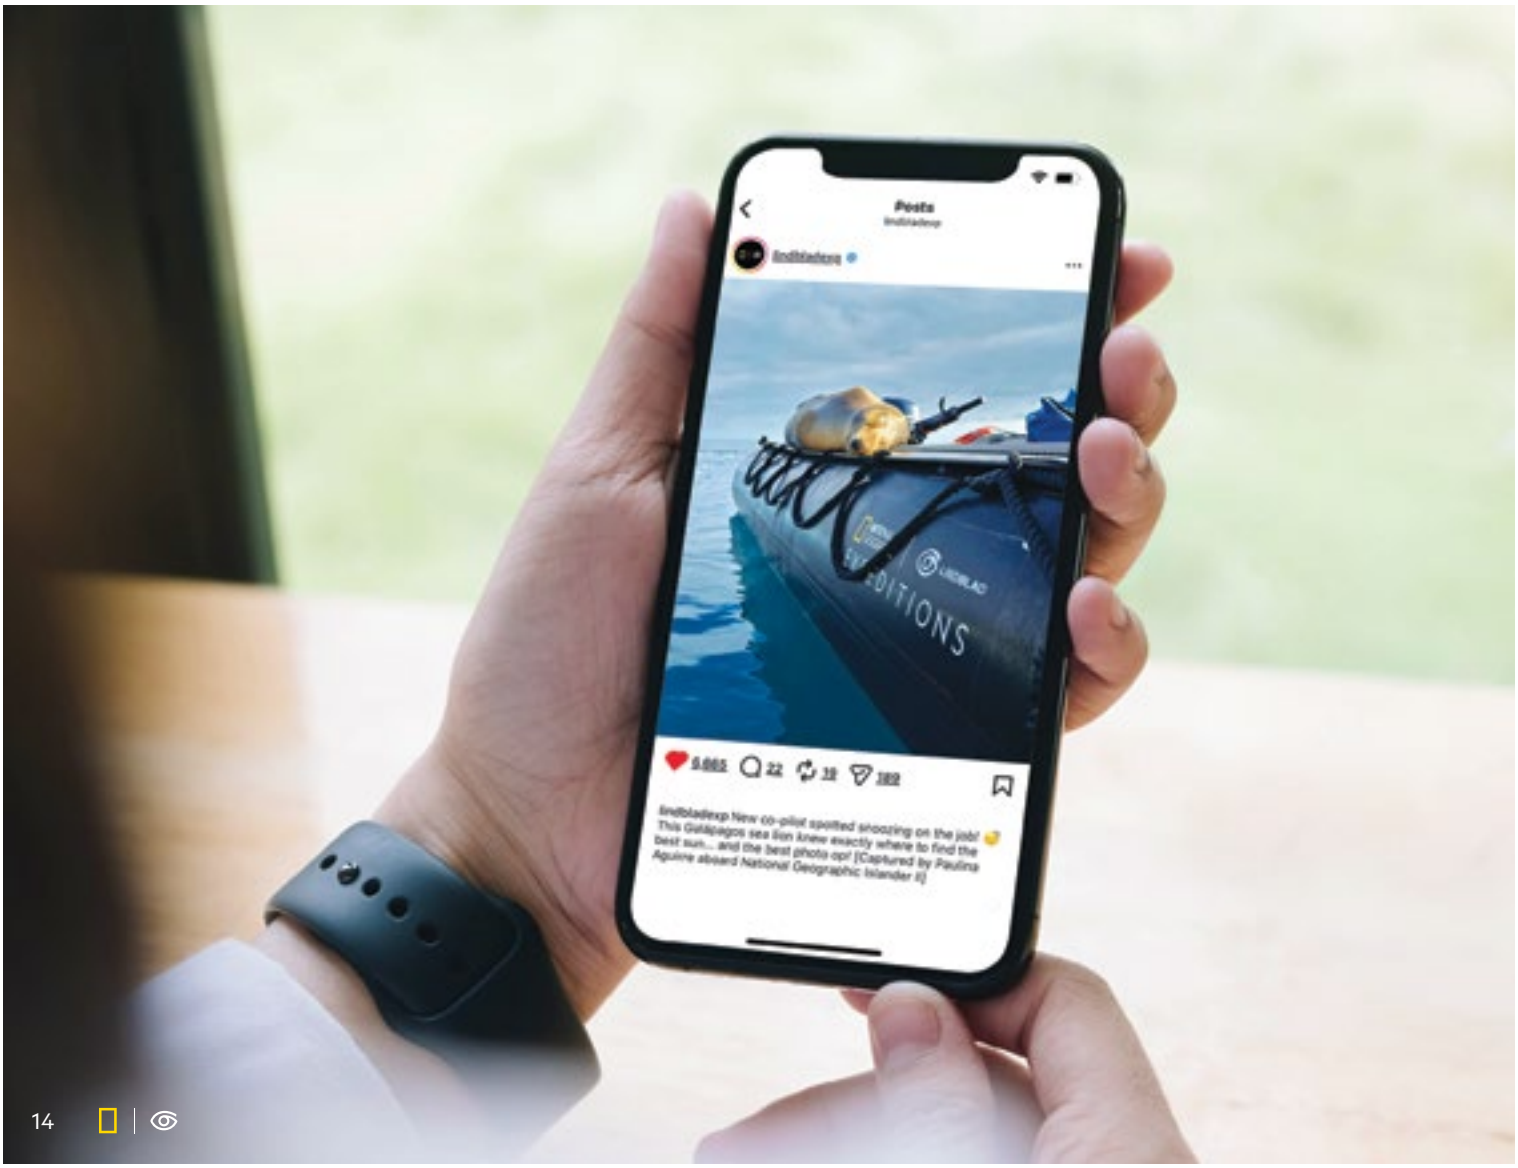
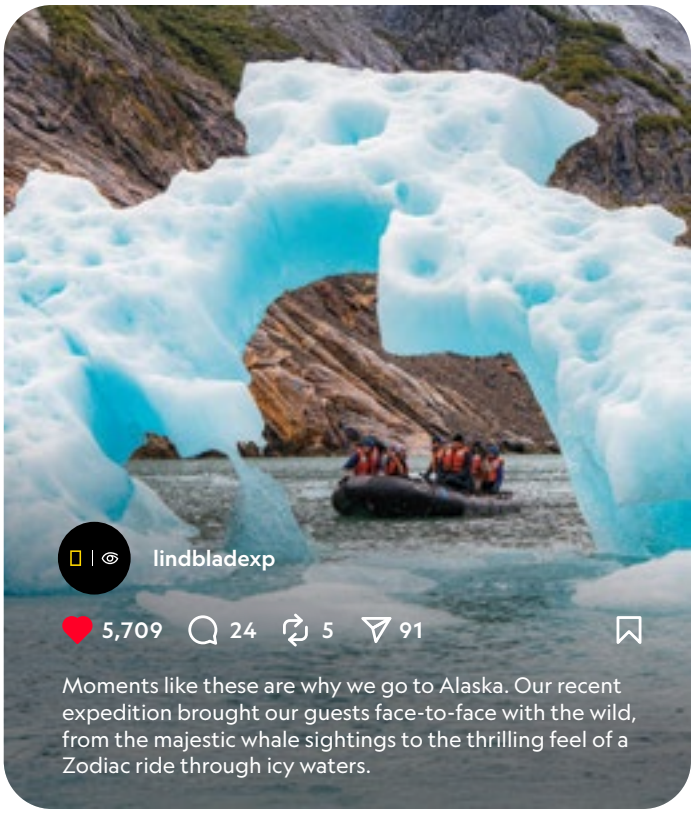
Every day on expedition, remarkable moments unfold—guests come upon elusive wildlife, travel through wild and dramatic landscapes, or have unexpected encounters that can reshape how they see the world.

Our new social series, This Just In, brings you into those moments with updates from our ships around the globe. You'll see everything from surprising animal behavior to striking natural scenes and glimpses of the meaningful conservation work happening in the places we visit.

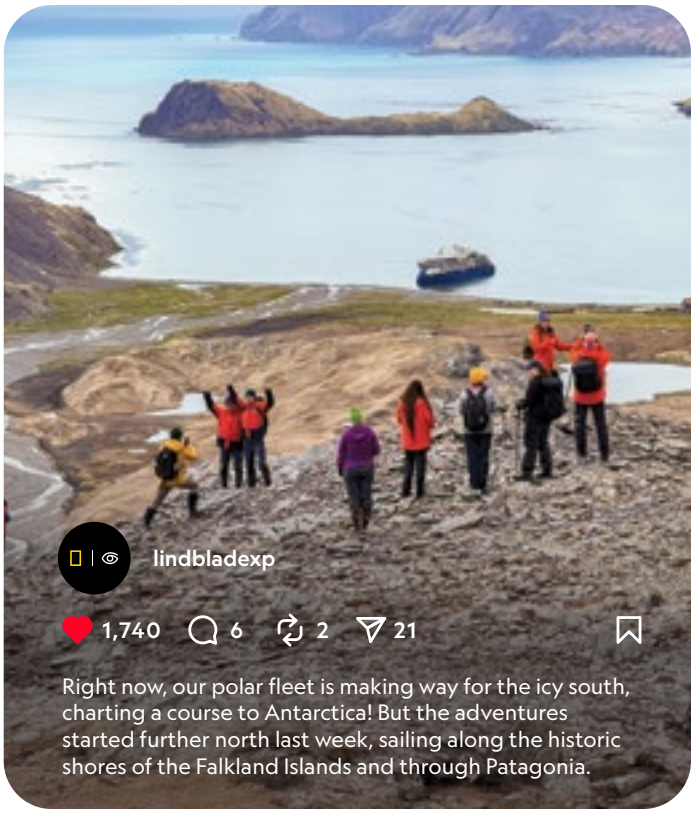


The Galápagos Islands truly come alive through the lens of our expedition team. Each photo tells a story of the unforgettable moments our guests experience here.



Moments like these are why we go to Alaska. Our recent expedition brought our guests face-to-face with the wild, from the majestic whale sightings to the thrilling feel of a Zodiac ride through icy waters.

In celebration of #WorldPhotographyDay, we honor the incredible talent of our naturalists and certified photo instructors. Their work goes beyond capturing an image; it captures the spirit of these islands.



Right now, our polar fleet is making way for the icy south, charting a course to Antarctica! But the adventures started further north last week, sailing along the historic shores of the Falkland Islands and through Patagonia.

THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC-LINDBLAD EXPEDITIONS FLEET

Meet the fleet of ships that charted a course for expedition cruising, each built small and nimble so you can go deeper into your destination and quickly disembark to spend more time exploring. The vessels are as diverse as their destinations—designed to discover specific geographies and stocked with a curated collection of expedition tools to enhance your experience on shore and on board. While their offerings are varied, key features unite the ships: comfortable, well-appointed cabins; lively social spaces designed to foster a sense of community; and capacities that never exceed 154 guests.

BLUE WATER SHIPS

Built to shine in icy polar seas, the four ships in the blue water fleet comfortably sail deep oceans across the globe. The purpose-built National Geographic Explorer is the definitive expedition ship, while the gracious National Geographic Orion has a rich tradition of navigating distant shores, from the Atlantic isles to Antarctica.

The new state-of-the-art sister ships National Geographic Endurance and National Geographic Resolution are charting a course for the future of the fleet, with top-tier ice classes and luxurious amenities, including infinity hot tubs and geodesic igloos for sleeping under the stars at sea.

Clockwise: National Geographic Endurance and National Geographic Resolution in Antarctica; National Geographic Explorer and National Geographic Orion off the coast of Europe; sustainable and regional cuisine is served wherever possible; Category 7 suite aboard National Geographic Explorer.

GALÁPAGOS SHIPS

National Geographic-Lindblad Expeditions sails four expedition ships in the Galápagos year-round, each with a unique style to offer a full spectrum of travel options. Geared for in-depth discovery, National Geographic Endeavour II and the new National Geographic Gemini embody the style of travel refined during more than 55 years of exploration here.

National Geographic Islander II is an expedition vessel with the spirit and soul of a private yacht, featuring shared spaces that emphasize indoor-outdoor living. The catamaran National Geographic Delfina is the fleet's most intimate ship in the Galápagos, accommodating 16 guests in eight spacious staterooms.

CHARTER SHIPS

Certain destinations are best discovered aboard bespoke vessels that evoke the splendor of their historic ports of call. National Geographic-Lindblad Expeditions hand-picks ships that are uniquely suited to sail in these special places and fully charters them just for our travel groups.

Step aboard and enjoy all the benefits of traveling aboard our fleet, whether you wish to sail the Mediterranean aboard the elegant Sea Cloud II, come face to face with Alaska's awe-inspiring Hubbard Glacier aboard the Greg Mortimer or navigate through the heart of Scotland's Highlands and islands on board the intimate and purpose-built Lord of the Glens.

Clockwise: Sea Cloud II under sail; a guest takes in river views from in the Amazon suite aboard Delfin II*; guests enjoy kayaking and Zodiac cruises from the* National Geographic Venture*; spa treatment aboard* The Jahan.

U.S. SHIPS

The U.S. fleet includes two pairs of sister ships: the purpose-built National Geographic Quest and National Geographic Venture and the intimately scaled National Geographic Sea Bird and National Geographic Sea Lion. Each nimble vessel was designed with a shallow draft to access remote corners of North and Central American coastlines, from secluded coves in Alaska to jungle rivers in Costa Rica. They also have the advantage of being U.S.-flagged, eliminating the need for domestic customs stops and allowing you more time to explore.
